▶ $150,000 Life Settlement Helps Pay for Experimental Treatment

Asset Life Settlements recently brokered the life insurance policy for a 70 year old cancer patient suffering from multiple melanoma. The policy owner needed a source of cash in order to receive experimental treatment in Europe which would likely extend his life expectancy.

The case was first brought to our attention when the client met with his insurance advisor to discuss his $600,000 life insurance policy. The premium payments were becoming a burden and he no longer needed the coverage for income protection for his family. His primary goal was to identify a source of cash to pay for experimental treatment to prolong his life.

His insurance advisor explained that by selling his policy, the client could eliminate the premiums and receive a sizable cash payment. The client agreed to proceed with the transaction and we were asked to broker the policy in the secondary market.

Asset Life submitted the case to 10 secondary market buyers and received five offers ranging from $70,000 to the highest bid of $150,000. The client was deeply grateful to his insurance advisor for recommending the life settlement and was impressed with Asset Life's ability to negotiate the highest possible payout.

▶ Rare Form of Cancer Motivates Patient to Sell $1.8M Policy for $350K

Asset Life Settlements was approached by the insured's agent regarding his 59-yr. old client who had recently been diagnosed with a rare form of cancer. The insured needed money for his medical expenses and also wanted extra cash so he and his wife could travel to see family members.

When his agent learned that his client owned a $1.3M term policy that was nearing the end of its term, he recognized that a "term-conversion life settlement" could be the perfect solution. After explaining the transaction to his client, they agreed to move forward with a life settlement and asked us to broker the case.

Asset Life Settlements submitted the case to 12 institutional funding sources in the secondary market. Interest in the case was strong and we received multiple offers that ranged from a low offer of $120K to the highest (winning bid) of $350K.

The client was extremely grateful to his agent for recommending the term-conversion life settlement and impressed with Asset Life Settlements' skill in negotiating the highest possible offer and ensuring that no money was left on the table. The client and his wife were grateful for the cash to enjoy his remaining years.
